Vodafone M-Pesa reaches 25 million customers milestone

Vodafone M-Pesa now has more than 25 million active customers, marking another year of accelerated growth for the innovative mobile money transfer service, it was announced today.

Across markets in Africa, Asia and Europe, active customers of M-Pesa increased by 27.1% to 25.3 million in the year ended 31 March 2016, boosted by market launches in Albania and Ghana and supported by a network of more than 261,000 agents in 11 M-Pesa countries.

Vodafone Group Director of Mobile Money, Michael Joseph, said: Since 2007, M-Pesa has enhanced the lives and livelihoods of people without bank accounts, giving them access to essential financial services through their mobile phones.

I am delighted and proud that M-Pesa has reached the 25 million active customers milestone. M-Pesa continues to expand, evolving beyond traditional money transfers to encompass savings and loans, payment of salaries and benefits, settlement of utility bills and school fees and to enable vital health and agricultural solutions.

Vodafone M-Pesa continued to innovate during the last year, adding new features and services and entering into partnerships with public and private sector organisations. Highlights from some markets included:

- Government Partnerships: Vodafone has entered into a partnership with the Ministry of Social Development in Lesotho to pay welfare grants using M-Pesa. Kenya's Ministry of Agriculture is now paying fertilizer subsidies using M-Pesa. In India, the National Rural Livelihoods Mission utilises M-Pesa to enable financial inclusion for women's groups and the National Rural Health Mission is using the service to disburse pre-natal health benefits.
- India: The launch of an M-Pesa smartphone app enables Indian customers to use M-Pesa to pay for goods on Ebay, for taxis with TabCab and to book train tickets on India's national railways. Enterprises including Walmart are using M-Pesa in India to improve cash management and business efficiency.

- Lesotho: Vodafone launched a service enabling customers to convert airtime to M-Pesa credit to pay for emergency treatment. Also, hundreds of community health workers across seven hospitals and 67 clinics managed by Partners in Health are now paid using M-Pesa and international children's charity World Vision pays a portion of employee salaries using M-Pesa.
- Mozambique: Global development agencies now use M-Pesa to pay employee salaries and allowances. Water, electricity and pay television companies in the country collect payments via M-Pesa. The national carrier LAM also accepts M-Pesa for air tickets.
- Tanzania: Solar solution companies including Mobisol, Off-Grid Electric, M-Kopa and others use M-Pesa to help provide affordable clean energy for thousands of rural households. Qatar Airways and KLM now accept M-Pesa for air tickets from Tanzania.
- Kenya: Safaricom has partnered with healthcare finance organisations PharmAccess Foundation and CarePay to introduce M-Tiba, a mobile health wallet that channels money from donors and government meant for health services directly to recipients. Customers can redeem their savings digitally with cashless access to a network of registered clinics and pharmacies. The World Food Programme is using M-Pesa to help deliver their food aid programme in Kenyan refugee camps

Over the past 12 months, Vodafone has agreed a series of deals with partners to enable M-Pesa customers to transact with other services and across borders, including:

- Global Framework Agreements with two international money transfer hubs, TransferTo and MFS For Africa, laying the foundations for strong partnerships with other money transfer operators around the world.
- An agreement with MTN Mobile Money to enable direct money transfers between M-Pesa and MTN customers in seven countries across East Africa.
- The launch of international money transfer services in Romania, Lesotho and Albania.
- An agreement between Tanzania's major mobile operators, including Vodacom, to enable their domestic mobile money services to be fully interoperable - the first market in Africa to do so.

Vodafone Foundation launches Instant Schools For Africa to bring advanced educational resources to millions of young Africans

The Vodafone Foundation and Vodafone today announced the launch of one of the largest philanthropic programmes in the Vodafone Foundation's 25-year history. The Instant Schools For Africa initiative will launch this autumn, providing millions of young people in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Ghana, Kenya, Lesotho, Mozambique and Tanzania with free access to online learning materials developed in conjunction with Learning Equality* - a leading not-for-profit provider of open-source educational technology solutions - and with education partners, ministries of education and local education experts in each country. A similar initiative was recently launched by Vodafone's South African subsidiary Vodacom which worked with the Department of Basic Education to develop a free education portal - Vodacom e-school - that supports the national curriculum.

The educational resources provided under the Instant Schools For Africa programme will include subjects such as maths and science, providing millions of children and young people in seven countries with access to educational materials - from primary through to advanced high school level - comparable in quality, range and depth to those available in schools in the developed world. The materials - curated to align with local standards - will also include content designed for children who do not benefit from traditional schooling: UNESCO research found that 59 million children aged six to 11 were out of school in 2013, with 30 million of those children living in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Conventional teaching materials such as textbooks, reference books, past examination papers, assessment worksheets and classroom aids are prohibitively expensive for many African schools. Digital learning materials provided via mobile networks - with basic tablets for pupils and a laptop and projector for educators - offer a cost-effective alternative and can be updated instantly to ensure pupils receive the very latest information and insights in the classroom and at home.

Children, young people, educators and others who are customers of Vodafone or its African subsidiaries will not incur any mobile data charges when accessing the Instant Schools for Africa educational resources. The Vodafone Foundation and Vodafone will engage with the other major mobile operators in the countries involved to encourage other providers to adopt a similar non-commercial approach in order to stimulate widespread adoption of what, for many young people, will be life-enhancing opportunities to learn and gain new skills.

The Instant Schools For Africa programme represents a significant expansion of the Vodafone Foundation's ongoing mission to use digital and mobile technologies to bring critical educational resources to the people who need them most. In March 2015, the Vodafone Foundation announced the creation of the Instant Classroom - digital school in a box - a portable case containing equipment to enable tablet-based teaching in schools where electricity and internet connectivity are unreliable or non-existent. The Instant Classroom is being deployed in partnership with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) Innovation and Education units to schools in refugee settlements in Kenya, Tanzania and the Democratic Republic of Congo. It is estimated that the Vodafone Foundation's work in refugee settlements will benefit at least 62,000 children and young people by the end of 2016 and the Foundation is targeting up to three million children and young people in refugee settlements by 2020.

Edgar Filing: VODAFONE GROUP PUBLIC LTD CO - Form 6-K

Vodafone Foundation Director Andrew Dunnett, said: Education is a powerful antidote to poverty. Children and young people in some of the poorest countries on earth are desperate to learn but parents, teachers and other educators often lack both means and materials to teach them. Mobile and digital changes everything. Our Instant Schools For Africa programme will put a wide range of advanced learning materials - tailored for each local language and culture - into classrooms everywhere, from city slums to remote villages. We believe Instant Schools For Africa could transform the life chances for very large numbers of young people.

Note to editors

*Learning Equality optimises all educational resources so that content can be delivered efficiently. Videos are optimised to be low bitrate, the web pages created by Learning Equality are configured to work over low-bandwidth data connections and the education modules can easily be stored on mobile devices. Educational content hosted by Learning Equality is designed for schools that do not have internet access but have their own local area network. The content is hosted within Vodafone's core network rather than on third-party servers via the internet which optimises the speed and reliability of connection. Pupils, teachers, parents and other educators simply need a data connection to the Vodafone network to access the materials. Vodafone and Learning Equality will provide other mobile operators with the technical specifications required to extend the benefits of this philanthropic programme to the largest possible number of beneficiaries.
