Subject Company: Tribune Media Company

The following letter was distributed by Peter Kern, the Chief Executive Officer of Tribune Media Company:

I wanted to take a moment to update you on the progress of our transaction with Sinclair.

First, let me thank you for all your continued hard work and diligence as we go through the lengthy exercise to complete this transaction. During the regulatory approval process there are, necessarily, limits on what we can communicate and how much interaction we can have with our future colleagues at Sinclair, and as a result we have not been able to communicate with you as regularly as we would like. However, with the filing of our proxy statement with the SEC completed and our special shareholders meeting set for October 19, we thought now would be a good time to ask Sinclair to address some of the questions and issues that may be top of mind for you.

I'd therefore like to introduce you to Chris Ripley, President and Chief Executive Officer of Sinclair Broadcast Group. Attached is a note from Chris to all Tribune Media employees and answers to some questions you may have.

Our goal over the coming months is to execute a smooth and seamless transition as we bring our two companies together. We are already working closely with Sinclair to make sure this happens. Importantly, we and Sinclair want this process to be as positive as possible for our talented and dedicated employees at Tribune and I think you'll see that reflected in the Q&A document, which covers such topics as the continuity of your benefits and severance.

Best Regards,

Peter

Employee Integration FAQs

1. What was announced on May 8, 2017?

On May 8, 2017, Sinclair Broadcast Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: SBGI) announced that it had entered into a definitive agreement to acquire Tribune Media Company (NYSE: TRCO) in a cash and stock transaction. Upon completion of the transaction, the combined company will be the most diversified television broadcasting company and will include our country's largest markets.

2. Why are Sinclair and Tribune combining?

The Tribune stations are highly complementary to Sinclair's existing footprint and will create a leading nationwide media platform. This integration will help to ensure the future of the free and local television model for both Tribune and Sinclair's local communities.

3. What will happen from now until the closing of the transaction?

Leaders at Tribune and Sinclair have begun working together on the integration plan but until the transaction closes, Sinclair and Tribune will continue to remain two independent companies and will conduct business as usual. Between now and close, Sinclair and Tribune leaders will continue working closely to ensure a smooth integration and transition and a seamless, uninterrupted experience for our viewers and business partners.

4. How will the integration process work? Where are decisions coming from?

The integration planning is managed by the Integration Management Office (IMO) and is supported by numerous Sinclair and Tribune employees from several departments (such as Finance, IT, HR). These department teams manage planning of integration activities for each department or function. The IMO also has cross-functional work teams that drive topics and issues that span across departments, such as communications. In addition, a Steering Committee has been formed which will oversee all aspects of the integration including SEC filings and approvals, integration management, and strategic business unit planning.

5. Why has communication been so limited?

Sinclair and Tribune have been subject to regulatory approval processes with a variety of agencies (e.g., SEC, DOJ, and FCC). Based on the rules and requirements of these processes there have been limitations on the communication that can occur between the companies' employees. We hope to start increasing our communication frequency as we move further along in the regulatory process, subject to the process requirements.

Second, there hasn't been much to communicate and there will likely not be much to communicate until more decisions are made and approvals are received.

6. Will I still have a job after the integration?

Our employees are our most valuable asset and we are looking forward to learning more about the exceptional talent that exists throughout our combined organization. As we do with any merger, we will conduct a thorough review of the policies, practices and procedures in place across the combined organization with an eye toward deploying both resources and people in the most effective fashion possible. While no decisions have been made regarding the structure of the combined company, you have our assurance that any employee adversely affected by this review will be treated with dignity and respect, in a manner reflecting the strong values shared by both companies.

7. Will there be severance for those who lose their job?

Stations do not run without people. We value Tribune employees and will be relying on them post-close. No decisions have been made regarding the structure of the combined company. Our intention is to keep doing business as usual and keep everyone focused on a successful integration. To help facilitate that goal, Sinclair has agreed to honor the current Tribune severance policy for all eligible employees through December 31, 2018. For those employees covered under an employment contract or collective bargaining agreement, the relevant provisions regarding severance in such contracts or agreements will continue to apply.

8. Will my benefits change as a result of the integration?

We know that one of your big concerns is the package of medical and retirement benefits that will be offered by the combined company. We can assure you that Tribune employees will maintain continuity of current benefits coverage through the close of the transaction and through the transition. One of our key objectives is to offer benefits that make our combined company a great place to work, and we will communicate more information regarding your post-close benefits as we are permitted to do so.

9. What does the transaction mean for me? How does this help with my professional goals?

Both organizations recognize the importance of talent to business success, and we are looking forward to learning more about the exceptional talent throughout our combined organization. We are bringing together two great companies with best-in-class people, ideas, processes and strategies.

The strategic rationale for this integration is growth. Employees will benefit from the opportunity to enhance their professional experience in new ways and a larger business will add opportunities that only growth and scale can bring. We will be developing a process for employees to pursue new internal opportunities.

10. Post-closing, how quickly will integration occur and what will the integration process include?

We have only recently begun integration planning activities. We are excited to begin the work of integrating our organizations and look forward to quickly learning more. Once we learn more, our Integration Management Office (IMO) will determine the timeline and process for integration after close with input from Tribune and Sinclair leaders.

11. What if I have additional questions?

Please contact your General Manager or local Human Resources representative.
