NEXSTAR BROADCASTING STATEMENT ON COX COMMUNICATIONS

ACTION TO DROP NETWORK AND LOCAL COMMUNITY

PROGRAMMING IN NINE MARKETS

13 Stations Affected as Cox Has Yet to Reach

Distribution Agreement with Nexstar Broadcasting

IRVING, Texas, January 30, 2016 Effective 11:59 p.m. local time on January 29, cable TV provider Cox Communications (Cox) dropped the network and local community programming for 13 stations impacting viewers in nine markets. The action follows Cox's refusal to reach a new distribution agreement allowing the cable television provider the right to continue to air the highly rated programming from the stations' owner, Nexstar Broadcasting Group, Inc. (Nasdaq: NXST) (Nexstar).

Nexstar deeply regrets Cox's ill-advised action which deprives viewers in the affected markets of broadcasts of leading network content from ABC, CBS, FOX, NBC, CW and MyNetworkTV as well as local news and other programming produced specifically for these local communities. Viewers affected by the loss of service from Cox have several alternatives to continue watching their favorite shows including other local cable providers, DISH, DirectTV, over-the-air, and services including Verizon's FIOS and AT&T U-verse.

The development is highly unusual for Nexstar but more common for Cox. Nexstar has established a long-term record of completing hundreds of agreements with multichannel video programming distributors (MVPDs) or cable TV, satellite TV, telecom companies) for the carriage of its television stations and is proud of the fact that it has had no material service interruptions related to distribution agreements since 2005. In contrast, Cox is routinely involved in disputes with content providers and since 2012 has dropped network and local community programming from five other station owners as a result of its refusal to agree to fair and reasonable market terms to carry some of the most highly rated programming on television. Notably, in addition to its cable television service business, Cox is also a television station owner and in this capacity had two disputes in 2014 with MVPDs.

Nexstar has received support from industry experts regarding its right to receive fair compensation for its programming including the following statement from a former FCC official, "No such thing as a blackout in today's world. Any viewer with a digital TV and antenna can watch television for free. It's only when MVPDs choose to stop transmission that consumers get harmed. Broadcasts are always on."

For the last five months (including a one month extension), Nexstar has been negotiating in good faith to establish a mutually agreeable contract with Cox. Significantly, Nexstar has offered Cox the same rates it offered to other large distribution partners with whom it successfully completed negotiations with in December. In response, Cox publicly disparaged Nexstar and misled viewers as well as legislators and regulators, the investment community and the public at-large (Nexstar set the record straight on January 28).

Nexstar is committed to consistently elevating the level of service provided to local communities in the markets it serves across the United States by making meaningful capital investments to expand local news, lifestyle, sports, weather and other programming and enhancing station infrastructure, production resources and technologies. Nexstar regrets that Cox is willing to hold its paying subscribers hostage because it won't agree to fair and reasonable terms for viewers' favorite programming.

Nexstar remains eager to complete an agreement with Cox consistent with those it has made with every other cable, satellite and telco provider in order to end Cox's action that is both unnecessary and punitive to its subscribers.
