CB&I and McDermott to Combine

Employee FAQs

Transaction Overview:

Who is McDermott, and what do they do?

McDermott is a leading provider of integrated engineering, procurement, construction and installation services for offshore and subsea field developments worldwide. McDermott delivers fixed and floating production facilities, pipelines and subsea systems from concept to commissioning to help oil companies safely produce and transport hydrocarbons. Founded in 1923, it has a reputation for innovative designs, high quality construction, global installation resources and disciplined project execution.

McDermott's focus on offshore and subsea developments is a natural complement to CB&I's focus on the downstream oil and gas and power industries. Our companies have complementary capabilities and customer relationships, as well as a similar geographic focus.

Why are CB&I and McDermott combining? What is the rationale for the decision?

Through this combination with McDermott, we will create a premier, vertically integrated engineering, procurement, fabrication, construction and installation provider across the energy infrastructure industry with significant scale, diversification and balanced global presence in high-growth markets.

Together, we will have a broadened reach across the entire energy industry, and a substantial competitive advantage that responds to evolving customer needs. The combined company will benefit from an enhanced financial profile primed to drive growth and achieve significant synergies, will have a stronger capital structure and is expected to generate strong free cash flow.

Why are McDermott and CB&I a good fit for a combination? What are the synergies between the two companies?

Our combined workforces will form a leading, vertically integrated onshore-offshore company, and together we will have a broadened reach across the entire energy industry, and a substantial competitive advantage. The combined company will be able to pursue large-scale projects and respond to evolving customer needs by providing them with the most complete energy infrastructure services, while offering employees continued opportunities for growth in broader areas of our industry.

Uniting our businesses and cultures will also create positive opportunities to achieve the following:

Provide a customer-centric, total solution

Collaborate on end-to-end facility solutions to maximize the value of our customers' assets

Better manage risk through a focus on people, process and vertical integration

Have the scale to compete with global E&C contractors

Counter market cyclicality through more diverse upstream and downstream offerings

Integrate our engineering, construction and fabrication capabilities

Transaction Details

What regulatory approvals are required?

The transaction is subject to customary legal and regulatory requirements and conditions, including shareholder approval and antitrust review in the U.S. under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act.

What is the timeline for completion of the transaction?

The transaction is expected to close in the second quarter of 2018, subject to customary legal and regulatory requirements and conditions.

Is there a plan if the transaction does not close?

We are excited about the transaction and believe our stakeholders will be as well. The transaction offers significant value to shareholders, and the combination will create significant long-term opportunities for shareholders, customers and our employees.

Integration of Companies

Who will lead the new company?

We have a best-in-class leadership team here at CB&I, and McDermott recognizes that. Our leadership team has spent a considerable amount of time with their counterparts, and there is alignment in terms of philosophies on employee engagement, empowerment and communication. Following the close of the transaction, McDermott's President and CEO, David Dickson, will lead the combined company. Additionally, our President and CEO, Patrick K. Mullen, will stay with the company for a transition period in order to assist with the integration efforts as we work to ensure the capabilities and synergies of the combined company are maximized. Following the close of the transaction, operational leadership of the combined company will include representatives from both companies.

Does this impact the sale of CB&I's Technology business?

As you know, in August, we had announced our intent to sell our Technology and former Engineered Products businesses to strengthen the company's balance sheet. However, after careful consideration by our Supervisory Board and management team, we ultimately decided to pursue this alternative path for CB&I. They understand how valuable the Technology business is, and that it has the potential to be even more valuable as part of the new company.

The Technology business is a unique business that has consistently generated attractive margins with minimal capital requirements. It also provides early visibility into our customers' capital spending plans and pull-through opportunities for the other parts of our business.

How will the company be structured once the combination is finalized?

We believe that combining the world-class expertise, capabilities and experience of McDermott and CB&I will strengthen our financial outlook and expand our business across geographies and end markets. This vertical integration will give the new company a substantial competitive advantage that responds to evolving customer needs.

The announcement is only the beginning of this process, and we are still working through several details. CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing further information throughout this process.

What will be the name of the new company?

The announcement is only the beginning of this process, and we are still working through several details. CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing further information throughout this process.

Current Projects and Work

How will the combination impact current and future projects?

McDermott has established industry-leading bidding and execution capabilities, ensuring optimal allocation of resources and certainty of project schedule. This creates significant opportunities for CB&I to capture additional value from market trends (e.g., next round of LNG in Qatar) across the entire value chain.

Until the transaction is completed, CB&I and McDermott will continue to operate as independent companies and it remains business as usual. Please continue to focus on your day-to-day responsibilities, while keeping in mind safety as our top priority.

Will we continue to bid work? What happens to our existing projects?

Yes, CB&I will continue to bid work and execute its existing projects.

Employment and Benefits

Will I still have a job? What is the impact to me?

This combination impacts every CB&I employee, but we believe it is the best path forward. This combination is expected to create a positive future for the company. The CB&I family is built around an extremely talented group of employees. Our partners at McDermott recognize that and they look forward to working with us in creating new opportunities for success as one company.

Many of you will have questions about your future. These are natural and understandable, and CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing further information throughout the process. In the meantime, we should all stay focused on our work, our projects and our customers and continue providing the best service possible.

Will common functions be combined? Will there be staff reductions?

Our announcement is only the beginning of this process, and we are still working through several details. CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing whatever information we can on the progress of the transaction. To that end, both CB&I and McDermott will be forming integration planning teams, with Jim Sabin leading the planning efforts for our company, before the close of the transaction. The CB&I family is built around an extremely talented group of employees. Our partners at McDermott recognize that and they look forward to working with us in creating new opportunities for success as one company.

What happens from now until the transaction is completed? Will my job change?

Our business will continue to operate as it always has during the transition period. We will continue to work in the normal course of business on all projects with the same current customer and vendor contacts. It is critical we remain on the path we are on and keep our company operating in the same manner we do today. We should all stay focused on our work, our projects and our customers and continue providing the best service possible.

Will my pay and benefits be the same?

The announcement is only the beginning of this process, and we are still working through several details. CB&I's leadership is committed to sharing further information throughout this process.

Will my years of service be recognized after the close of the transaction?

Yes, service years will be recognized after the close of the transaction.

Forward-Looking Statements

Various statements in this communication, including those that express a belief, expectation or intention, as well as those that are not statements of historical fact, are forward-looking statements. These forward-looking statements include, but are not limited to, statements that relate to, or statements that are subject to risks, contingencies or uncertainties that relate to: anticipated cost and revenue synergies, best-in-class operations, opportunities to capture additional value from market trends, maintenance of a consistent customer approach to pricing, safety and transition issues, free cash flow and permanent financing. These forward-looking statements speak only as of the date of this report; we disclaim any obligation to update these statements unless required by securities law, and we caution you not to rely on them unduly. We have based these forward-looking statements on our current expectations and assumptions about future events. While our management considers these expectations and assumptions to be reasonable, they are inherently subject to significant business, economic, competitive, regulatory and other risks, contingencies and uncertainties, most of which are difficult to predict and many of which are beyond our control. These risks, contingencies and uncertainties relate to, among other matters, the following: the ability of McDermott and CB&I to obtain the regulatory and shareholder approvals necessary to complete the anticipated combination; the risk that a condition to the closing of the anticipated combination may not be satisfied or that the anticipated combination may fail to close, including as the result of any inability to obtain the financing for the combination; the outcome of any legal proceedings, regulatory proceedings or enforcement matters that may be instituted relating to the anticipated combination; the costs incurred to consummate the anticipated combination; the possibility that the expected synergies from the anticipated combination will not be realized, or will not be realized within the expected time period; difficulties related to the integration of the two companies, the credit ratings of the combined company following the anticipated combination; disruption from the anticipated combination making it more difficult to maintain relationships with customers, employees, regulators or suppliers; the diversion of management time and attention on the anticipated combination, adverse changes in the markets in which McDermott and CB&I operate or credit markets, the inability of McDermott or CB&I to execute on contracts in backlog successfully, changes in project design or schedules, the availability of qualified personnel, changes in the terms, scope or timing of contracts, contract cancellations, change orders and other modifications and actions by customers and other business counterparties of McDermott and CB&I, changes in industry norms and adverse outcomes in legal or other dispute resolution proceedings, and the other risk factors discussed in McDermott's and CB&I's most recent Annual Reports on Form 10-K, as well as each company's other filings with the SEC. These factors are not necessarily all the factors that could affect McDermott or CB&I. Unpredictable or unanticipated factors could also have material adverse effects on actual results of matters that are the subject of these forward-looking statements. We do not intend to update our description of important factors each time a potential important factor arises, except as required by applicable securities laws and regulations. We advise our security holders that they should (1) be aware that factors not referred to above could affect the accuracy of these forward-looking statements and (2) use caution and common sense when considering these forward-looking statements.
