In response to inquiries from the press on May 2, 2018, Elaine P. Wynn issued the following statement:

“I am frankly astounded by the Company’s statement. I did communicate with the Company. I sent a letter more than a week ago requesting information to which I am clearly entitled based on Nevada case law. My outside counsel followed up twice, and my proxy solicitor called twice as well. The Company denied all of these lawful requests. I therefore had no choice but to sue.”

“I fail to see how rushing to an annual meeting is in the best interests of shareholders. The Company first publicly announced the meeting date when it filed its proxy statement on April 18. This left the shortest solicitation period in recent years—28 days (compared to 41 and 42 days in the last three years). By inhibiting my ability to communicate directly with beneficial owners of Company shares, the delay in sending me the shareholder lists has given the Board an unfair advantage in this very short solicitation period when every day counts.”

“The Company has stated that it will provide me with the shareholder lists I seek as ‘a sign of [its] good faith.’ Acting in good faith would have been to provide the lists last week, as I requested. Instead, just hours after learning the litigation had been filed, the Company suddenly discovered the law and then admonished me for failing to communicate.”

“In my view, the delay in sending me the shareholder lists has disadvantaged all shareholders, as the Company continues to pursue policies that seem to advance the interests of an entrenched board over shareholders. This behavior is not emblematic of a ‘New Wynn.’ Instead, it shows that very little has changed at Wynn Resorts.”
